Greyhound Initiates "The New Look"

Loyola Hosts Teachers' Language Conference

Last Friday, January 26, Loyola College sponsored its annual Coordinating Conference in Modern Language Teaching. The topic of the Conference was "The Present Status of Modern Languages."

Professor Vincent J. Colimore, Chairman of the Modern Language Department at Loyola, presided; guest speakers were Rev. James C. Donohue, Ph. D., Superintendent of Schools in the Archdiocese of Baltimore; Brother Cuthbert, C.F.X., from Mt. St. Joseph High School; and Dr. Blanche Price from The Johns Hopkins University.

Elementary Success

Father Donohue spoke of the success of the pilot program in teaching French to third-graders in five parochial schools of the Archdiocese and of future plans for the expansion of this program including a Summer Institute to be held at Mt. St. Agnes College to provide qualified teacher.

He also urged the high schools of the Archdiocese to begin now to make plans for handling the students who will come to them from this program in future years.

Trends in High School

Brother Cuthbert's address indicated some of the trends in Modern Language teaching on the high school level, including the use of language laboratories and expansion of modern language courses to three and four years. Brother Cuthbert also proposed a permanent organization of the Modern Language teachers of Baltimore to meet monthly for discussion of their common problems.

New Opportunities

Dr. Price spoke on the statue of Modern Languages at the college level. She stressed the importance of language training for scientists as well as students of the humanities. Among recent developments she noted the availability of new opportunities for study and student travel abroad.

Art for Art's Sake

Because of the lack of interest shown thus far, the dates for the Quarterly Art Exhibit have been moved to the week of March 19 through 23. Anyone desiring to enter an original oil painting, pen and ink sketch, sculpture or photographic study should see John Tillman, Art Editor, for details. Please support this worthwhile student project.

Genovese And Becker Get Top Positions

By Bill Legg

With the appearance of this issue a new editorial staff will assume their duties on your student publication. The members of this staff were appointed by the outgoing editorial board in conjunction with the Greyhound moderator, Father James Conlin, S.J.

Pete Genovese, a junior English major, succeeds Bill Hartman to the post of Editor-in-Chief. Pete, an active member of the Dramatic Society and vice-president of the junior class, assumes the position after a year as Features Editor.

Managing Editor

Henry Becker moves up from his former position of News Editor to Managing Editor of the Greyhound. Henry is also a junior English major and the vice-president of the Glee Club. Hank is also the social chairman of the junior class.

The news page will be edited jointly by Frank Walsh and Dave Schroeder. Frank, a sophomore English major moves up from Assistant. Dave is a frosh English major who is an active member of the Glee Club.

Features Co-Editors

Jim Burns and Vince Baldini will co-edit the features page. Vince, our former capable Business Manager, is an economics major and vice-president of the Management Club. Jimmy is a chemistry major and one of our varsity swimmers.

Tom Kenney remains as our Sports Editor, which attests to his fine work. Tom, a junior History major, is a capable performer for our track and cross-country squad.

The position of Business Manager has been filled by Bob Bell, a capable history major.

Copy Staff

Remaining as Copy Editor, Willie Hoffman, a junior historian and dramatist, will be ably assisted by Bob Johnston. Jim Eckstein and Mark Fayman will fill the important, but somewhat unheralded positions of Exchange Editors.

Assistant Editors for the pages were also appointed. Bill Legg is incumbent news assistant. Paul Montgomery becomes assistant features editor and Jimmy Latchford becomes Tom Kenney's assistant for the Sports page.

When asked about his "new look" editorial policy, Mr. Genovese said, "To be the voice of the student body and the heralder of our fine faculty, to publicize activities before their happening and criticize them after their completion, to do our best in printing features which will gratify the interests of our readers. These will be our goals."

FAREWELL

The editor-in-chief of the Greyhound must be willing to accept responsibilities which oblige him to make some sacrifices. Unlike any other extracurricular activity, publishing the college newspaper requires considerable and regular attention. The editor spends approximately ten hours a week working on the Friday edition. Such time is well spent because, although it is often tedious and depressing, it is nevertheless personally rewarding.

For me, the satisfaction obtained from being an editorial staff member of the Greyhound seldom came from journalistic creativity, but rather, from personal affiliations with students—not the student body as a whole, for they see the paper in view of its essential purpose; and rightly so, are more accustomed to criticize and object than to praise. The satisfaction of which I am speaking, is that which I acquired through the mutual friendship and co-operation of the Greyhound staff.

The editorial staff members have always impressed me as men who enjoy combining their abilities and services to procure something, the entire value of which is really known only to them. In other words, to me, and I am sure this is true of most of the editors, the pages of print are less gratifying than the personal relations encountered in producing them.

In the future, I will remember few headlines, stories, editorials, cartoons and pictures. However, I doubt that I will ever forget those Monday afternoons and the personalities of Henry Becker III, P. A. G., Tim Himmelheber, Father Lawler, Vincent Baldini, Willy Hoffman, John Quentin Feller, Father Conlin, T. Kenney, and many others.

As retiring editor of the college newspaper, I thank all of the staff and moderators for their unselfish cooperation in working "to inform the readers concerning all the events held at and/or sponsored by Loyola College." As a fellow staff member, I thank them for their friendship and encouragement.

To my successor and former assistant, Pete Genovese, I wish the best of success. Both he and the school should prosper from his appointment; for unlike any editors I have ever known, Pete is an English major with journalistic ambitions. To Pete's assistants, and especially Henry Becker, I hope you assist him as well as you did me.

To all appreciative of the Greyhound's fruits and to all those who assisted in producing them, I sincerely thank you and say "Farewell." W. F. H.

Thank You, Mr. Hartman

The job of Editor-in-Chief is no bed of roses. Along with the honor that comes with this job, there is a commensurate amount of work and responsibility. It is this man who must answer for the final outcome of the paper every Friday. He must oversee the work of every member of the staff, including the typists. His work, concern, and interest must be a constant source of inspiration to all those beneath him.

When Will Hartman assumed the editorship of the paper last year, there was some doubt as to how effective he would be. During the past year his consistent concern, tireless effort, and unselfish donation of time have, in the main been responsible for the dedication found in the present staff. Thanks for everything chief, and goodbye.

John Baynes Speaks On...

New Council Plans

Everybody expects that a Student Council will improve with time, and that its 2nd semester will be more productive than its first. We think that the facts will verify this hope at Loyola during the next few months.

To start the semester with a bang, let it be announced that the Loyola College Ring (Jenkins Co.) will soon (within a month) be sold for less than $45 on campus, a reduction of $8 from the previously quoted price at the bookstore. The new price resulted from the council's request and advice to the administration, and the excellent spadework and cooperation from the Dean of Studies.

Results from the December Questionnaire of The Student Body are still pending completion. At least three projects have been undertaken, however, the first amounting only to the publication by the ROTC Dept. of their grading system, which before the exams, was rather nebulous. The other projects concern the problems of the Science Libraries; the results of these projects will be published in the near future.

A long term project for the 2nd semester will be the initiation of a Student's Course Evaluation program. During the semester holidays, the questionnaire was drawn up, and statistical information was prepared to establish the value of Course Evaluation Programs. It is hoped that a pilot plan will be finished before the Easter holidays by administering the test to ten selected classes from the Freshmen to Senior, science and non-science courses. If the Course Evaluation Program proves reasonably effective in these classes, it will be considered for application to all classes. Let it be emphasized, however, that no action will be taken without full consent of the faculty and administration. Another project-in-the-offering is an attempt to increase the amount of informal, out-of-class conversation between instructor and student. Two ideas are being considered: the first is a series of Faculty-Student Coffee and Conversation hours, and the second is a project to encourage the faculty to join the student at lunch in the cafeteria, informally and as frequently as possible. It is hoped that the results of the December Questionnaire, the Course Evaluation Program, and encouragement of informal report between faculty and student will be effective in creating a more intellectual atmosphere at Loyola. If any of the above projects are successful they will be a definite contribution to the Loyola Community.

The council is also engaging in initial preparation for Loyola Day's sports competition between the classes, and is preparing a motion to order popular magazines (Life, Time, Sports Illustrated, etc.) for the student lounge, splitting the cost with the Dean of Men. Other action will depend upon the expression of interest and suggestions from the students.

Sport's Extra: The winner of the swimming race between Tony Rivezzo and Bob Kammer Saturday night January 27 was Kammer. Loved those bathing suits.

The Senior Class did not make much profit on the Prohibition Daze Dance because of the expense of the lavish decorations. The Barber Shop Quartet was good but kind of quiet.

Results of the exams: 1. Lower enrollment; 2. Fewer athletes; 3. More cussing; 4. Additional revenue on part of school from conditions; 5. Less office space in the Dean's office because of the presence of the Dean with clients.

Loyola statisticians show that the mortality rate among statisticians is surprisingly high.

Reminder to all Loyola teachers: The first letter in alphabet is A.

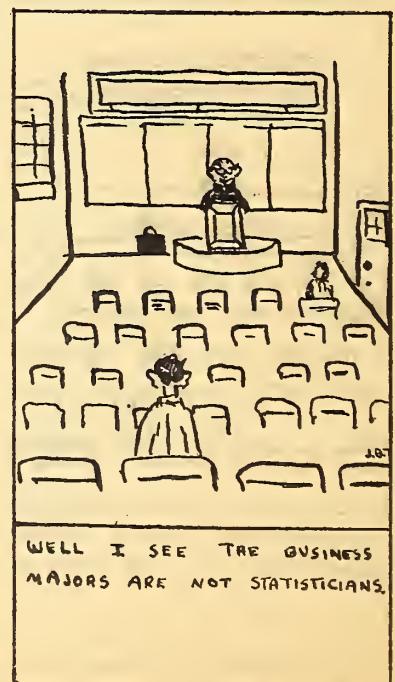

We have noticed that the Barber's chair is actually a reconverted Dentist's chair. Remember, Giovanni, cut, don't pull.

We were just about to congratulate the Senior Class on their red and white wallpaper decorations, when we realized it was Joe Bowman with his back to us.

At the dance we noticed that all the table decorations were not empty.

Will Hoffman claims that he is miffed because he saw one Faculty member getting a free haircut the other day. Willy claims that we should elect the barber Dean of Men so that maybe all of us could get "excused cuts."

C.O.D.

Sticks and Stones

In every student community there can be found a small number of students who consistently give freely of their time and effort for the betterment of the student body as a whole. Such a group of students is the Student Council Class Constitution Committee, consisting of Chairman Richard Lawrence, sophomore student council representative, and committee members Duffy, Genovese, Copenhaver, and Vondersmith, the four class vice-presidents. The committee met on campus during the semester break to draw up an ordinance for the regulation of classes and their functions.

The results, I think, are most gratifying, for the ordinance successfully sets down in print, for the benefit of both the current student body and future student bodies of Loyola College, the numerous traditions and "common law" regulations which have evolved during the years, and under which classes have heretofore functioned. As a result, if the ordinance is passed by the Council and the administration, such topics of student interest as the powers and duties of class officers, including provisions for their recall and succession, the rules regarding the frequency and the conduct of class meetings, and provisions for adequate publicity for such meetings, the appointment of lay and faculty class advisors, the rules regarding the good standing of members of a class, the provisions for handling and disbursement of class funds, a set of rules governing class functions, and several other matters, will be set down clearly and in detail. Some of these regulations are familiar to the students; others are not, and still others are entirely new. All are matters which are, or at least should be, of interest to each and every Loyola College student, and the passage of this ordinance will make him better aware of his position as a student.

The sincere and realistic approach of the committee has been outstanding. Every provision of the ordinance was unanimously adopted without parliamentary maneuvering. In controversial questions of jurisdiction, the committee has conferred with, or arranged to confer with the other parties involved, in order to iron out all difficulties before they submit the ordinance for ratification by the Student Council and the administration. I strongly urge the ratification of this ordinance. G. P. M.

Washington's National Theatre plays host to some of the finest shows which appear in the U.S. Recently, under the management of Sol Hurok, the Old Vic Company performed in the nation's capitol. On this tour, the group is presenting G.B. Shaw's Saint Joan, Shakespeare's Macbeth, Romeo and Juliet. Macbeth is the subject of this review.

The plot of the play is well-known. It is a study in greed and corruption. The leading lady, the wife to Macbeth, has often been cited as a rival even to Medea in her ruthlessness. Perhaps the greatest criticism of this drama is that it is hard to believe.

Accustomed to the Judith Anderson portrayal of Lady Macbeth, the Old Vic's Barbara Jefford presented a much more plausible insight into the character. Much less powerful in the role than Miss Anderson, Miss Jefford allowed John Clemens, who played Macbeth, to bring more depth and strength to the character than is usually seen. In her desire to underplay, however, Miss Jefford failed to achieve the intensity necessary, especially in Lady Macbeth's first appearance in the play. Another weak character was Duncan, who among the hearty, Scottish thanes was as out of place as the proverbial 90 pound weakling at Muscle Beach.

Their weakness was compensated for to some extent by the fine performances of John Clemens and William Sylvester who played Macduff. One interesting detail is the staging of the scene in Macduff's castle where Lady Macduff's castle where Lady Macduff and the little Macduffs are slaughtered. The Recently, as everything must at one time or another, the spotlight was reversed and the television industry was exposed on Capitol Hill. The duty of the industry to provide informative shows as well as entertainment apparently has not been realized.

At times it would seem that television is geared to the level of children, fools, and so-called "teen-agers." The intent of these shows is neither to inform nor entertain, but to provide inexpensive air time for sponsors who care little for the dignity and intelligence of the viewer.

The parents of children of the "toy age" must be pitied. Toys, which are very expensive and break very easily are advertised in settings which do not come with the package and, of course, junior "must be the first in his gang" to own this toy.

The housewife is often victimized by deceptive packaging and bottling, which amounts to less product in a larger package. She also sees endorsement of products to be used inside machines made by leading manufacturers. The fact that a deal has been made is quickly and silently noted at the end of the commercial.

Judging from their commercials, some sponsors feel that the average viewer does not possess good hygienic habits, to say the least. The male is constantly told that he has bad breath, vile odor, wild hair, and other assorted niceties. It is impossible to find the woman of the species, as she is hidden under all sorts of makeups, bleaches, and foundation garments.

Much work has been done by the NBC and CBS networks in informative programs. The quality of these shows is very good, but the quantity is relatively small. This is an immense step considering some of the trash which has recently been prevailing the screens.

A point which has been raised is that much of the guilt of poor taste and helter skelter programming lies with local stations. WJZ-TV, a local station, cancelled their evening news report and replaced it with a "teen-age" bowling show, which advertizes love at a bowling alley.

Broadcasters do not relish strict Federal supervision, but because of allowing pointless sex and violence, fraudulent commercials and broadcasts in poor taste, they have brought stricter supervision on themselves.

GREYHOUND SPORTS

by Tom Kenney

Tomorrow night, the Hounds will take on Catholic U. in a Mason-Dixon Conference contest. Loyola is presently in pretty good shape as far as the M-D standings are concerned. A victory over C.U. in addition to wins over Towson and Hopkins next week could put the Hounds near the top in the Conference ratings.

Rivalry within the Mason-Dixon loop has really decreased within the past few years. One reason is the fact that many people automatically concede the Conference title to Mt. St. Mary's. Another reason for the decrease in M-D interest and activity is the fact that many of the Conference schools are playing a large number of games outside of the conference. In fact, certain schools are playing many outside games that they do not have a sufficient number of Conference encounters to qualify for the M-D title.

No matter what the reasons may be, basketball rivalry in the Mason-Dixon Conference is not very brisk at the present time, at least from the spectator point of view. This state of affairs is a far cry from former years when Mason-Dixon cage fans watched their standings with as much gusto as baseball fans scan the American and National League ratings.

Father-Son Dinner

Tickets for the Father and Son Dinner and basketball game may be purchased from Charley Graham or George Yurek or at the Athletic Office.

"B" Cagers Top B. I.

Last Thursday afternoon here at Evergreen, Loyola's "B" squad hoopsters trimmed visiting Baltimore Institute by a 77-58 count. The contest saw the young Hounds start off very slowly. They trailed from the opening buzzer until, with 2 minutes remaining in the last half, Loyola finally knotted the score at 24 all. In the final two minutes of the half, the Hounds chalked up four markers while holding the visitors scoreless and left the floor at halftime with a 28-24 advantage.

Big Second Half

In the second stanza, the Green and Gray broke the game wide open. Led principally by Freshman Billy Morris, Loyola found numerous soft spots in the visitors' zone defense and outscored B.I. 49-34 to win going away.

Morris was high scorer for the Hounds with 24 tallies. Mike McCarthy dropped in 14 points; Gene Lace and Stan Kyper had 12 apiece. The Hounds' scrappy backcourt duo, Jimmy Coyle and Jim Moler notched 8 and 7 points respectively.

UPSETTERS: Steve "Bear" Bogusky and Charlie O'Donnell helped to pace the Loyola cagers to an exciting 66-63 victory over American University. The Hounds are now 4-1 in conference play.

Cagers To Meet C. U.; Mount Tickets On Sale

Coach Nap Doherty's cagers, currently boasting a 4-1 Mason-Dixon Conference log, will play four Conference games within the next eight days, climaxed by the Mount Saint Mary's contest here next Saturday night. Tomorrow night Loyola will play host to Catholic University's Cardinals in an 8:45 encounter. The Cards, who are having a very good year, should provide a stiff test for the Hound hoopsters. Next Tuesday and Wednesday nights, Loyola will meet Towson State and Hopkins respectively. The Hounds would like to bolster both their Mason-Dixon log and their morale by victories over Catholic U., Towson, and Hopkins before tangling with the powerful Mounties from Emmitsburg on Saturday, the 10th.

The Mounties are currently rated seventh among the nation's small college cage squads. They are unbeaten in the Mason-Dixon Conference and have an 11-3 record overall.

In the individual statistics, Carl Cuneo posted the highest average, 111 pins per game. He was followed closely by Charley Nemecek with 110 and Smuck, 109.5. Smuck posted the highest total for a 3 game set, 370 pins; Nemecek was second in this category with 369. In the competition for high game honors, Nemecek edged Smuck, 145-143.

The second round of league competition will begin this afternoon. Four new teams have been added for this round bringing the total number of teams in the circuit to 10.

Entries for the intramural basketball loop close today. I-M director Nap Doherty says that cage play will start as soon as possible.

Dad - Son Dinner Set Feb. 21st

On the night of February 21st, the annual Father and Son Dinner and basketball game will be held here at Evergreen. This event is open to all Loyola students and their dads. After the dinner, which will cost $2 per person, the Hound basketball team will play host to Washington College in a game which has been moved up to 8 P.M. instead of the usual 8:45 P.M. starting time. Fathers accompanied by their sons will be admitted to the game free of charge.

Hound Swimmers Gain Upset Win Over Akron U.

Last Friday afternoon in the Loyola pool, the Hound mermen downed the previously unbeaten University of Akron natators by a 52-43 count.

As has been quite usual in Loyola swim meets this season, the final 400 yd. freestyle relay was the deciding factor. The Akron coach, seeing that the match would go down to the final relay, held his best free-stylers out of the 440 yd. freestyle, the 2nd to the last event, so that he could save them for the finale. However, the Loyola relay quartet, consisting of Joe Doyle, Tippy Cronin, Marty Pilsch, and Al Kubelius, was equal to the occasion and easily beat the Akron foursome in the sparkling time of 3:46.

Double Winner

The Hounds had two double winners in the meet. Al Kubelius copped both the 100 and the 220 yd. freestyle races in addition to anchoring the winning relay team. Ken Freimuth won the 200 yd. individual medley and the 200 yd. breaststroke. Besides swimming a fine relay leg, Marty Pilsch captured the 440 yd. freestyle for Loyola and also took second spot behind Kubelius in the 220 yd. freestyle event. Joe Doyle and Tippy Cronin took second places in the 200 yd. backstroke and the 200 yd. butterfly respectively.

Comforting Victory

The win was a comforting one for Hound coach Bill Klarner. The Akron squad won its conference title last season and was unbeaten this year before meeting Loyola. The Hound team appears to be coming around after a not-so-good start.

Tonight at 8 P.M. Loyola will receive a stiff test as it visits the always-powerful LaSalle. The Hound's next home meet will be against William and Mary on Friday, February 9th.

Hound Matmen Register 1-1 Conference Record

The Greyhound grapplers' record presently stands at 1-1 in Mason-Dixon competition and 1-2 overall. The victory came at the expense of Hopkins by a 24-9 score; the losses were to Baltimore University, 22-16, and to Bucknell, 37-0.

The B.U. match was a hotly contested affair which wasn't decided until the final matches. Baltimore won the first two weight classes but Alex Schlipp got Loyola back onto the right track with a pin in the 137 lb. class. Adraw by Mike Buchness in addition to wins by Tom Milligan and Colon Delphi gave the Hounds a thin 16-14 margin going into the final two matches. However, the Bees copped the final two weight classes and the match by a 22-16 score.

Today and tomorrow, Loyola will attempt to regain its winning ways as it travels south for matches with William and Mary and Hampden-Sydney. The Hounds are favored to defeat Hampden-Sydney; William and Mary should provide a stiffer test.
